Dm Tell you a little story and it won't take long Bb
C 'Bout a lazy farmer who wouldn't hoe his corn Dm
Dm The reason why I never could tell Bb
C That young man was always well Dm
 He planted his corn in the month of June
 By July it was up to his eyes
 Come September there came a big frost
 And all the young man's corn was lost

His courtship had just begun

Said young man, "Have you hauled some corn?"
 "Well I tried and I tried and I tried in vain,
 But I don't believe I raised one grain."

Well he went down town to his neighbor's door
 Where he had often been before
 Sayin "Pretty little miss will you marry me,
 Little miss what do you say?"

"Why do you come for me to wed?
 You can't even make your own cornbread
 Single I am and will remain.
 A lazy man I won't maintain."

He turned his back and walked away
 Sayin "Little miss you'll rue the day.
 You'll rue the day that you were born
 Givin me the devil cause I wouldn't hoe corn."
