

Antemas - By The Wind

```
The full Moon is shining behind everything
                            tom:
                {\color{red}\mathsf{Bbm}} (forma dos acordes no tom de {\color{red}\mathsf{Bm}} )
                                                                 So bright it can be seen in both hemispheres
                            Afinação: Eb Ab Db Gb Bb Eb
                                                                  I've been told the wind has the Master Keys
            [Refrão]
                                                                  Oh, you're right my friend, so don't be afraid
                                                                                 Em
                                                                  I remember when I've heard you sing
Invisible when you look
Has more than its sounds
                                                                You can hear my voice at the end of your journey
                                                                 [Pr~e-Refrão]
This is the wind
The more you feel it, the more you stay alive
                                                                 The wind and the rain become a hurricane
The seas and the sand from the land are the same
[Primeira Parte]
                                                                More than the brilliant stars and the Earth
                                                                 The atoms form somehow the universe
I hope that tomorrow is better than today
                                                                 [Refrão]
To learn all the skills taught by the wind
The old deep blue sweater with five hundred holes
                                                                 Invisible when you look
Attempting to heat the body over cold
                                                                 Has more than its sounds
                                                                 This is the wind
I swept all your sorrows for miles away
                                                                 The more you feel it, the more you stay alive
Storming the mysteries in your head
                                                                 Fighting for you
The change of the weather
                                                                 When Earth is on fire
The clouds high above reflect in the sea that they turn into
                                                                 I am the wind
[Pré-Refrão]
                                                                 From beginning to the end of time
                                                                 [Ponte 2] G D A
The wind and the rain become a hurricane
The seas and the sand from the land at the end are the same
                                                                As surely as winter gives way to spring
[Refrão]
                                                                 Tomorrow has no more Kings and Queens
Invisible when you look
                                                                 Excluded by the destiny of humankind
Has more than its sounds
                                                                                     Bm
                                                                Well everything you left behind is in your mind
This is the wind
                                                                 Through that door, there is no more
The more you feel it, the more you stay alive
                                                                              Gbm
                                                                And you will be inside the Antema___as
Fighting for you
                                                                 [Refrão]
When Earth is on fire
                                                                 Invisible when you look
I am the wind
From beginning to the end of time
                                                                Has more than its sounds
[Ponte 1] Bm G Am
                                                                This is the wind
          Bm D D
          Bm G Am
                                                                 The more you feel it, the more you stay alive
                                                                Fighting for you
[Solo 1] Bm Em G D
                                                                When Earth is on fire
[Segunda Parte]
                                                                 I am the wind
                                                                 From beginning to the end of time
The gold leaves are falling by the wind
Evoking the feels that insist on fade
                                                                Invisible when you look
```

Oferecimento Lojalele.com.br

