Spiky love left your wounds bleeding

Tried to force you to bloom by healing

So you have kept your guard up for so long

Looking for ways to disguise

The need of a hug to call home

Cause every search's ended in spite

But please, you must believe

Em

You don't have to change

True love doesn't seek

Nor does it demand, its own ways

Trade your fears for true love

Just put your stones down

And guard your own heart

It's hate that must be dethroned

No one's supposed to be set apart

Heaven is a one-room home

You must believe

You don't have to change

True love doesn't seek

Nor does it demand, its own ways

Trade your fears for true love

You don't have to fight to be right

Choose to be immutably kind, you'll be fine

Trade your fears for true love
