                                                                Was just a dream
One year, two years, time goes by.
                                                                And I am not
 People laugh and people cry.
                                                                For I am he
 Every morning the clock strikes eight.
                                                                With something more
 I go to work. I close the gate.
                                                                It's you and I
 And on my way, I sing a song
                                                                Reality.
 About my wife, where I belong.
                                                                If the clouds get together
 If the clouds get together
                                                                And talk about the weather
      A E A
 And talk about the weather
                                                                If it's rain they anticipate
 If it's rain they anticipate
                                                                Baby make no mistake
 Baby make no mistake
                                                                Yes the storm will break
 Yes the storm will break
                                                                But never me, you see.
     D E
 but never me you see.
                                                                Two years on.
 Two years on.
                                                                Two years on.
 Two years on.
                                                                A E A But only you can see me.
 But only you can see me,
                                                                Only you can see me.
 Only you can see me.
                                                                Two years on.
 For what I've got
                                                                Two years on.

                                                                Ah...
