You pull away, so easily

And I still call you, but I get your machine

Yeah I still call you, but I get your machine

And if I'm lucky I guess it's your roommate answering

But you're at the bar, or at Gene's

We go to dinner, but you won't hold my hand

We sit at the same table, but we don't play with our feet

Yeah we still go to dinner sometimes, but we don't sneak a kiss

When the waitress turns around

And we still watch movies, but we don't share the couch

Yeah we still rent movies, but we don't share the couch

Yeah we still watch movies sometimes, but you don't lay in my lap

The plot is slow, take a nap

And you even stay over, but we stay in our clothes

Yeah you'll even sleep over, but now we stay in our clothes

Yeah, you even sleep over sometimes, but we stay in our clothes

I'm only there so you're not alone

And you say that I hurt you, in a voice like a prayer

Yeah you say that I hurt you, and your voice is like a prayer

Yeah well maybe I hurt you some, let's contrast and compare

Lift up your shirt, the wound isn't there

I guess that your truth, is just the ghost of your lies

I guess your kind of truth, is just the ghost of your lies

Your kind of truth darling, is just the ghost of your lies

I see through them all the time

So I'm pouring some whiskey, I'm going to get drunk

Yeah, I'm pouring myself some whiskey, I'm going to get real

fucking drunk

I'm pouring some whiskey right now, I'm going to get so, so drunk

That I pass out and forget your face by the time I wake up
