His yellow-silk tie

In love she saw him falling for her in the fire of July
Then one day as the nights grew longer
Blackberry winter in a little white church

She remembers the change in her body

And how her heart seemed to flutter with the wind
Then one night as the days grew longer
That Indian summer

She brought love into the world

Somedays she'll talk about aunt Rosie
The sister she lost

 Asking when she's coming over
And why she hasn't called
Somedays I just hold her fragile hand
As Tom crawls across the floor

Somedays it just kills me
Watching her memories slip away a little more
