

Current Joys - A Different Age

Tom: G
Intro:

[Primeira Parte]

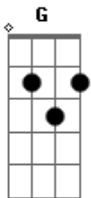

Oh, you don't know me 'cause I'm from a different age
 And you can't see me 'cause I live in a different age
 And you can hurt me but you wouldn't know what to say
 But you should believe me, our dreams are all the same
 Like a life without love
 God, that's just insane
 But a love without a life
 Well, that just happens everyday
 And I wish I could change, but I'll probably just stay the same
 And I wish you could see the Lord
 But this song is a joke and the melody I wrote, wrote!

[Segunda Parte]

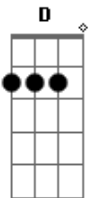

Oh, you can't hear me 'cause I sing to a different age
 And you should fear me 'cause I believe in a different age
 But I live in the city that lives in a different age
 Oh, I live in a city that lives in a different age
 Where all the poets are writing up wires
 And our just singing songs
 Oh, all the poets are writing up wires
 And hours are just singing
 This city's got nothing for you here, kid
 Oh, I told you just go home
 They're saying this city is useless
 But we've already done it all
 Oh, all the poets are writing up wands
 And hours just singing songs
 And I wish you could see the Lord
 But this song is a joke and the melody I wrote, wrote!

[Guitarra 1]
