

Duffy - Don't Forsake Me

□Why do you break me? Again and again
Intro: C Cm G Bm C Cm
                                                                   I can't make it alone
                     Bm
                                                                   ( G Bm C Eb )
All the casualties that I've left behind
                                                                   All the judges and all the disarray
\hfill\square And\ I, and I hide them in the corners of my mind
                                                                   You keep on trying me, but you're only pushing me away.
                                                                   \square I don't want you to go, but I can't tell you're here.
□All the memories, nothing are the same
                                                                   □You're just another soul that I'm making disappear
\squareI've learned so many things, but the bitterness remains
                                                                  I'm sick of drying everybody else's tears, with nobody to dry
                                                                  mine
I'm sick of drying everybody else's tears, with nobody to dry
                                                                  Don't, don't forsake me.
                                                                   Why do you break me everytime?

Don't, don't forsake me.
                                                                   I'm sick of drying everybody else's tears, with nobody to dry
□Why do you break me every time?
                                                                  mine.
\squareI'm asking you, don't, don't forsake me.
