

Emory Lane - At Your Feet

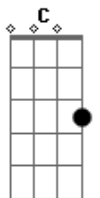

Am tom:
 You have the worl in your hands
 You have my heart at your feet
 You have everything I need
 You don't see colors like I do
 You don't see clouds in the hills
 And how they line up with my eyes
 Under the sky, under the light
 I see the blue under your skin
 I feel the earth we're living in
 And I see bags under your eyes from when you smile
 Well, I've got mine, but they're from crying over you
 And all the stupid things you do
 Well, I've stupid things to say and stupid things to feel for you
 You have the world in your hands
 You have my heart at your feet
 You have everything I need

Why do I think of you, in all the little things I do
 Maybe I think somehow you'll care
 But I can't seem to see in front of me
 I don't know where I should be
 I can't see a thing and I can't feel
 Into the woods, into the place I would go
 Into the grass, into the sky,
 Into the birds and how they fly
 Until someone tells me how I've gone too far
 Tell me: Have I gone too far? - take me home
 Don't leave me alone
 But it's the hill I scream those things for you
 And all the stupid things you do
 You have the world in your hands
 You have my heart at your feet
 You have everything I need
 You have the world in your hands
 You have my heart at your feet
 You have everything I need
