

Florence and The Machine - Landscape

Tom: G
Intro: - G Bm D Gb

She can't see the landscape anymore It's all painted in her grief

All of her history etched out at her feet

Now all of the landscape, it's just an empty place

Acres of longing, mountains of tenderness

Cause she's just like the weather, can't hold her together

Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow

Cause it's burning through the bloodline, It's cutting down the family tree

Growing in the landscape, darling, in between you and me once) She wants the silence but fears the solitude

She wants to be alone and together with you original strumming) So she ran to the lighthouse, hoped that it would help her see

She saw that the lighthouse had been washed out to sea

Cause she's just like the weather, can't hold her together
Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow

Cause it's burning through the bloodline, It's cutting down the family tree

Growing in the landscape, darling, in between you and me

I wanna give you back the open sky (Strum once)

Give you back the open sea

Open up the ages, darling, for you to see

You put the gun into your mouth to bite (Quietly)

You pull it and spit out

Cause it's running in the family

Oh the rich and to me

She's just like the weather, can't hold her together

Born from dark water, daughter of the rain and snow

Cause it's burning through the bloodline, It's cutting down the family tree

Growing in the landscape, darling, in between you and me
