

Gene Clark - Echoes

```
Tom:
Intro: C Bb C Bb C Bb
On the streets you look again
At the places you have been
Or the moments that you thought, where am I going
          Bb
Though the walls are like the dead
They reflect the things you've said
And the echoes in your head continue showing
Here the castles you can build
Out of dreams you half fullfilled
          Em
Won't keep out all of the ill wind that is blowing
And you'll look still for a trace
Of an opening in a place
Where you find the life that you were used to knowing
( C Bb C )
       Bb
You can walk out in the night
And be sure that it's all right
To exaggerate the world that's only being
You can watch Regina dance
          C
Through the crystal panes of glass
                                                 D
```

Yet you know that there's so much that she's not seeing
Still, you hold one precious thought
After all this time you've sought
That she might be just protecting what she longs for
And her eyes are veiled with black
'Cause she plays she can look back
At the love she wanted so, but says is no more
(Db B Db)
The lights go on, commence the cold
As your senses will be sold
     Ab
To the parrot watchers mimicking no reasons
To pretend that what they are
From the fact completely far
         Ah
While the truth may be betrayal, lies and treason
Build their towers in the sand
        Bbm
Down the roads of their command
When the kingdom is the innocence they're stealing
And infection easily spreads
            F#7M
Through the searching, twisted heads
As they team up to tear down each others' feeling
(Db B Db)
