

Gene Clark - The Virgin

Tom: G
Intro: B Gb E B Gb E B

She went off to the city
To find what she was looking for
To identify, to really try
To find herself some hope
With the summer sun for laughing
Then the winter rain did pour
She was lovelier from learning
And from living, loving more

From her dancing loving young soul
And the gypsies in her dream
To the pulse of stark acceptance
When the winds began to freeze
With no curfews left to hold her
And no walls to shield her pain
Finding out that facts were older
And that life forms are insane

The presence of protection seemed
To fade, as did her doubt
That she now was no exception
Nor was the love who pushed her out
Though the streets cried out, "go, homesick"
Virtue strength of mind would ring
In the melodies of meaning
The sad song she learned to sing
(B Gb E B Gb E B)

Now her teachers and philosophers
And the poet's silver throat
Are the vessels which on wisdom's
Karmic ocean she will float
Was this her revolution?
Just a child in love's crusade
With the question in her innocence
Through the lies her eyes betrayed
(B Gb E B Gb E B)
