

Halsey - Hurt Feelings

Or maybe this is just another trick
                tom:
        [Primeira Parte]
                                                                That hasn't happened yet
                                                                [Refrão]
My dad is almost home
I can't tell time yet but I know
                                                                Wash me in the water
                                                                    Em
                                                                You can cut off all of my hair C
Because the air becomes electric
                                                                And I'll, be changin' like the weather
And my mother cleans the stove
We're walkin' through the door
                                                                But I'll never be like him
And both my eyes will find the floor
                                                                 'Cause blood is thick but water is forever
And I will search my brain to find something
                                                                And I'm stiffer than a board
I might get yelled at for
                                                                Lighter than a feather
He'll come in with a frown and tell me
                                                                And that girl will be a problem
"Sit your ass right down"
                                                                Only if you let her
Or he might get his kicks from jokin'
                                                                And I left it back home
 That he's just playin' around
                                                                But I can't help forget her
And in a few years I will leave
                                                                [Ponte]
But I will perpetually believe
                                                                I thought that it was my fault Em C
That any man who tells me that he loves me
                                                                And now sometimes I still do
Is hidin' somethin' up his sleeve
                                                                You didn't chase me through the park
[Refrão]
                                                                So now I'm, chasin' after you
                                                                            С
                                                                But I can't, keep off the illusion
Wash me in the water
You can cut off all of my hair
                                                                            Em
                                                                Oh, I can't find your point of view C G
And I'll, be changin' like the weather
                                                                Oh, I can't bear to fake a smile
                                                                     Fm
But I'll never be like him
                                                                When you walk into the room
[Segunda Parte]
                                                                [Refrão]
The other girls date older guys
                                                                 'Cause blood is thick but water is forever
And wear their T-shirts late at night
                                                                And I'm stiffer than a board
But everything I own that's oversize \ensuremath{\mathsf{S}}
                                                                Lighter than a feather
Belongs to me, it's mine
                                                                And that girl will be a problem
And I don't have souvenirs of all the earliest of years
                                                                Only if you let her
                                                                And I left it back home
You know my father isn't dead
But it don't feel like he's still here
                                                                But I can't help forget her
It's strange now that he's greyin'
                                                                Wash me in the water
 Gettin' older by the day
                                                                You can cut off all of my hair
                                                                And I'll, be changin' like the weather
And my eyes tell me that he's harmless
Despite what my heart has to say
                                                                But I'll never be like him
[Pré-Refrão]
                                                                 'Cause blood is thick but water is forever
                                                                And I'm stiffer than a board
So maybe just forget
                                                                Lighter than a feather
Maybe move on don't regret
