At last, when all of the world is asleep

You take in the blackness of air

The likes of a darkness so deep

That God at the start couldn't bear

And sit unseen, with only the inner upheld

Your reflection can't offer a word

To the bliss of not knowin' yourself

With all mirrorin' gone from the world

Still the mind, rejectin' this new empty space

Fills it with somethin' or someone

No closer could I be to God

Or why he would do what he's done
