

Jerry Lee Lewis - It All Depends (Who Will Buy the Wine)

Tom: C

The kind of life you're living since you left me
 I'm sure it's not the life you thought you chose
 That honky tonky world is not so flashy
 Bright lights and booze is all it really knows
 Not long ago you held our babies bottle

But the one you're holding now is a different kind
 You just sit and wait to be somebody's baby
 And it all depends on who will buy the wine
 Who ever sets them up and tips the waitress
 Your kind of love just might as well be blind
 You'll never know whos lips you'll soon be kissing
 And it all depends on who will buy the wine
