

Joe Bonamassa - Too Much Ain't Enough Love

Tom: C
                                                               I Can't get enough, when I'm lying by your side
  [Intro] Cm Ab Fm Cm Ab
                                                                                              ST0P
                                                               And in the middle of the night .
You walked in my life, with and angels smile
                                                               Too much, ain't enough love, to satisfy me.
                          Gm
How could I have known, the hunger locked inside
                                                               Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
                           Gm
We can start a fire, but we can't control the flame. Now I just can't wait
                                                               [Solo] Cm Ab Fm Cm Ab
    Gm
To feel that heat again
                                                                                         Gm
                                                               Do I miss your touch, or tell myself a lie. I Can't get enough, when I'm
And in the middle of the night.
                                      She cried
                                                               lying by your side
Too much, ain't enough love, to satisfy me
                                                               And in the middle of the night.
                                                                                                     She cried
Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
                                                               Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
                        Gm
Just seems like yesterday, I was running alone
                                                               Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
                                                               Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
I turned my back on love, but baby I was wrong
                                                               I got a burning heart baby
                                                                                                     Ab Fm
Do I miss your touch, or tell myself a lie
                                                               Too much ain't enough love to satisfy me
