

Kyle Craft - Heartbreak Junky

was so sweet baby so sweet
   [Intro] G C
E|----3-|
                                                               Maybe I can reconcile what I ripped in two
B|-5/7---3/5---2/4---
                                                               That haphazard, half-hearted love I was making with you
                                                               Yeah, I made it with you
                                                               But now the bars are closed and the city sleeps tight
So you fell in love and it wasn't with me
                                                               As I ramble home my wretched merry way
Hey that's fine, it's about time I let go Where down was up and feeling bad felt so right.
But whatever curse you put here in me
                                                               I thought that vertigo was here to stay
Well can you lift it babe before I hit the road?
                                                               [Refrão]
[Refrão]
                                                               We're talking hellfire, but at the time, it seemed funny
You were a charmer, I was a heartbreak junky
                                                               When all the demons left the woodwork to play
You were a diamond, I was the heap of fool's gold
                                                               With an angel and a heartbreak junky
You were the jet plane, I was the parachute failing Stuck in their rock bottom masquerade
i was the cheap ad when you were the centerfold [Ponte]
Then my sun set hard on carolina
                                                               So disconnect me baby, i've been dying to know how to give up,
Where she howled about the pender county line
                                                               get out, stay gone
                  G
                                                               Make me not wanna go back to the girl that I had before, she
And her six-string fingers ran the length of some boy's body
                                                               was so sweet baby, so sweet in younger dreams I though that body might be mine
                                                               Maybe I can reconcile what I ripped in two
                                                               That haphazard, half-hearted love I was making with you
[Refrão]
                                                               Yeah, I made it with you
You were a cold crush, I was a heartbreak junky
Now you're a mother and i'm a flashback son
                                                               So when eden burns behind you in the rearview
Yeah i'm a wasteland, you've got all your milk and honey
                                                               And you're off to find a stranger paradise
And back then I swore you were the only one
                                                               Where you can sing your own way out
                                                               Well, you know that i'll be around
[Ponte]
                                                               With a sweet-talk woman fading slowly
So disenchant me baby, i've been dying to know how to give up,
                                                               On a lovesick mind
get out, stay gone
