

Linkin Park - Guilty All The Same (feat. Rakim)

Tom: D Intro: Verse Pre-Chorus (now with some guitar): First part of the intro:

Chorus

After the chorus this little bridge kinda thing is played:

Then there is this piano part with some very deep tones. It's basically the same as the first part of the intro (2x):

Rakim's Verse (12x):

Then:

Then the guitar comes in again and joins the piano (2x):

The instrumental before the last chorus only consists of electronics, but you can play it like this:

After that, the (I'll just call it the second part) of the intro starts:

Lead Guitar (4x):

Chorus

Bridge kinda thing

Rythm Guitar (comes in after the lead guitar played the riff two times; 2x):

First part of the intro with effects

There is no guitar in the verse and the pre-chorus, just some

The solo uses some effects I've never heard of Linkin Park

piano and background before, I think there's even a Digitech Whammy Pedal to shift the pitch of the riff. Nonetheless, I wrote it down in effects. I think it's basically played like this...

it's original pitch so everybody can play it, whether they have a Whammy Pedal or not

Verse (2x):

(still it doesn't sound perfectly because I couldn't figure it out well).

Pre-chorus (2x):

Solo:

Chorus (guitar slowly fades in):

Acordes

