 There's a line on her jeans that a ball-point made
D
 From a careless mistake that she can't wash away
 And there's a heart on her sleeve from a spill of red wine
 There's a piece of green in the blue of her eyes

 She named it after me

There's a stray dog she feeds that she found in the street
 And he loves her to hold him, but he won't let her keep him
 And he claws at the door to be let out at night
 And she makes do without him, and she worries about him
 She named him after me

 So if you ever decide that you have to escape
 And travel the world, and you can't find a place
 Well, you could wind up believing
 That paradise is nothing more than a feeling
 That goes on in your mind

 So if ever find out what that is
 There's something you could do

'Cause if I ever hold that golden dream again

I want to tell you

I'm gonna name it after you
