                                                               I was so color blind
                                                               We were just wasting time
Woke up sweating from a dream
                                                                 Dbm
                                                               For my whole life
With a different kind of feeling
                                                               We never crossed the line
All day long my heart was beating
                                                                          Gb
                                                               Only friends in my mind

Searching for the meaning
                                                               But now I realize,
Hazel eyes,
                                                               It was always you
I was so color blind
                                                               Can't believe I could not see it all this time, all this time
We were just wasting time
                                                               It was always you
