When you know there's something missing
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            Then I look in my heart
                        Am G
In the dark, we're barely hangin' on
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             There's a light in the dark
Then you rest your head upon my chest
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             Still a flicker of hope that you first gave to me
And you feel like there ain't nothing left
