

Nick Jonas - Chainsaw

```
Tom: D
                                                               Where I held your body close for so long, so long
                                                               I'm gonna break the fucking china G
I'll take a chainsaw to the sofa
                                                               Cause it's just one more reminder you're gone, you're gone
Where I held your body close for so long, so long
                                                                [Post-Chorus]
                                                                We were building brick by brick
Walk in the house, lights are off
                                                                Now it's just a quicksand home, yeah
 In the closet by the door, there's your coat
                                                                So I'll take a chainsaw to the sofa
I wasn't thinking of you before
                                                               Where I held your body close for so long, so long
Too many rooms in this house, so I keep going out
                                                                [Bridge]
What the hell is that about?
                                                                I could put a sign in the lawn
We gotta find a way to be okay
                                                                 But it'd mean that I would wanna let you go
[Chorus]
                                                                And I don't wanna let you go
And maybe I'll just take a chainsaw to the sofa
                                                                 I could put a sign in the lawn
Where I held your body close for so long, so long
                                                                 But it'd mean that I would wanna let you go
I'm gonna break the fucking china
                                                                And I don't wanna let you go
                                          D
Cause it's just one more reminder you're gone, you're gone
[Verse 2]
                                                                I'll take a chainsaw to the sofa
When I get home, TV on
                                                                Where I held your body close for so long, so long
                                                                I'll burn everything that binds us
Drink in my glass, better make it strong
Some nights wanna fill this space
                                                                Take a lighter to the mattress and run
A tight dress and a pretty face
                                                                [Post-Chorus]
 Keep finding things that you left on purpose
                                                                We were building brick by brick
Did you plan that your timing's perfect?
                                                                Now it's just a quicksand home, yeah
Gotta find a way to be okay
                                                                So I'll take a chainsaw to the sofa
                                                               Where I held your body close for so long, so long
[Chorus]
Maybe I'll just take a chainsaw to the sofa
                                                                Yeah, so long
```

D

Acordes

