

Panic! At The Disco - LA Devotee

```
Tom: E
                                                                Couldn't ever try to make you see, no
   Cm
You got two black eyes from loving too hard
                                                                Static palms melt your vibe
And a black car that matches your blackest soul
                                                                Midnight whisperings
I wouldn't change ya, oh oh
Wouldn't ever try to make you leave, no
                                                                The black magic of Mulholland Drive
                                                                Swimming pools under desert skies
The neon coast was your sign
And the Midwest wind with Pisces rising
                                                                Drinking white wine in the blushing light
                                                                Just another LA devotee
Wouldn't change ya, oh oh
Wouldn't ever try to make you leave, no
                                                                Sunsets on the evil eye
                                                                Invisible to the Hollywood shrine
Static palms melt your vibe
                                                                Always on the hunt for a little more time
                                                                Just another LA devotee
Midnight whisperings
The black magic of Mulholland Drive
                                                                Just another
                                                                Just another, oh oh
Swimming pools under desert skies
                                                                Just another
Drinking white wine in the blushing light
                                                                Just another, oh oh
Just another LA devotee
                                                                Just another
Sunsets on the evil eye
                                                                Just another, oh oh
                                                                Just another LA devotee
Invisible to the Hollywood shrine
                                                                LA devotee
Always on the hunt for a little more time
                                                                LA devotee
Just another LA devotee
                                                                LA devotee
                                                                LA devotee
Just another
Just another, oh oh
                                                                The black magic of Mulholland Drive
                                                                Swimming pools under desert skies
Just another
Just another, oh oh
                                                                Drinking white wine in the blushing light
                                                                Just another LA devotee
Just another
Just another, oh oh
Just another LA devotee
                                                                Sunsets on the evil eye
                                                                Invisible to the Hollywood shrine
You got bleached out eyes from the valley sand
                                                                Always on the hunt for a little more time
                                                                Just another LA devotee
And the black tar palms keep weeping your name
I couldn't change ya, oh oh
Couldn't ever try to make you see, no
                                                                Just another
                                                                Just another, oh oh
The high rise lights read your rights
                                                                Just another
And a downtown storm with Aries rising
                                                                Just another, oh oh
Couldn't change ya, oh oh
                                                                Just another
                                                                Just another, oh oh
```

Just another LA devotee

Acordes

