

Pat Green - Ruby's 2 Sad Daughters

Tom: D

D G
 When the sun hits it right on its way down
 D A
 It was the prettiest thing in our little town
 D
 Every hour I'd sneak a glance over at the G
 Plastic frame and cracked glass
 D A D
 That holds the picture of Ruby's two sad daughters

Last mill closed when I was nine and Daddy left And Momma cried again
 I spent my nights cleaning Ruby's floors
 Just another cafe on a wind swept highway
 The farmers bitched
 We're no good at football anymore
 In this land that knows no laughter
 In this land that holds no water
 We were all in love with Ruby's two sad daughters

One went way out west
 One went way wrong
 One left at seventeen and the other couldn't wait that long
 Neither went anywhere with me
 Not to the games or the Dairy Queen
 Both split with the first boy who lied sweet And looked vaguely mean
 In this land that knows no laughter
 In this land that hold no water
 We were all in love with Ruby's two sad daughters
 Why so pretty and forlorn
 Why so permanently blue
 I guess ours wasn't much of a kingdom to rule
 Now when the sun hits it right on its way down
 It's still the prettiest thing in our little town
 Every hour I sneak a glance over at the plastic frame
 And I fix the glass that holds the picture of Ruby's two sad daughters

D G A D
 Why did hope leave town with Ruby's two sad daughters?
