Capostrate na 2ª casa

C
Twenty years to see New York reflected on subway trains
'Bout twenty more I'll be forty-four, head back to Tampa Bay

I killed a man there, in spite, and when he died, I took his place

Eighteen made you callous to the kisses that you gave

A coarse exchange, a cause for blame, and I stood out in the rain

You killed a man there, and I cried, but the rain masked the hurt behind your face

By the way dear we're alive, and it hurts cause we survived it
