

Shinedown - Breaking Inside

```
I won't be the last one in line
                                             D )
 (com acordes na forma de
                                                                I finally figured out what's mine
Capostraste na 3^{\underline{a}} casa
Intro: Gtr I: (capo on 3rd)
                                                                I don't wanna live to waste another day
                                                                Underneath the shadow of mistakes I've made
Verse:
Gtr I: (capo on 3rd)
                                                                'Cuz I feel like I'm breaking inside
                                                                I don't wanna fall and say I lost it all
I caught a chill and it's still frozen on my skin
I think about why I'm alone by myself no one else to explain
                                                                'Cuz maybe there's a part of me that hit the wall
How far do I go no one knows
                                                                Leaving pieces of me behind
If the end is so much better why don't we just live forever?
                                                                And I feel like I'm breaking inside
Don't tell me I'm the last one in line
Don't tell me I'm too late this time
                                                                I won't be the last one in line
I don't wanna live to waste another day
                                                                I finally figured out what's mine
Underneath the shadow of mistakes I've made
                                                                I don't wanna live to waste another day
       G
'Cuz I feel like I'm breaking inside
                                                                Underneath the shadow of mistakes I've made
                                                                'Cuz I feel like I'm breaking inside
I don't wanna fall and say I lost it all
'Cuz maybe there's a part of me that hit the wall
                                                                I don't wanna fall and say I lost it all
Leaving pieces of me behind
                                                                'Cuz maybe there's a part of me that hit the wall
             Α
And I feel like I'm breaking inside
                                                                Leaving pieces of me behind
Out here nothing's clear
Except the moment I decided to move on and I ignited
                                                                And I feel like I'm breaking inside
Disappear into the fear
You know there ain't no coming back when you're still carrying
                                                                And I feel like I'm breaking the past
You can't erase, separate
                                                                And I feel like I'm breaking inside
```

Cigarette in my hand, hope you all understand

Acordes

