

The Smashing Pumpkins - Thru The Eyes Of Ruby

```
Tom: D
                                                                 Phasor A only, Sweep: just below 2, Depth: 7, Feedback: 7.5
Eb tuning
                                                                 4 ("Breathing Underwater....")
Piano intro
                                                                 G1 (still phased)
there are _several_ layered guitars for this don't ask.
G1 slight distortion
                                                                G2 (tremolo phasing)
G2
                                                                   strummed slowly
                                                                    (think "Soma")
G3 (first time only) Tremolo (fast phasing)
                                                                5 ("And if you spin...")
                                                                G1
G1 Distortion
                                                                     slight distortion or what...)
G2 Distortion
                                                                G1 Distortion (brighter than G2 )
G1 Phasing
                                                                 G2 Distortion
G2 Clean
                                                                G3 Distortion (Lead Fill)
```

I strongly believe that the phaser used is the Mu-tron Bi-phase. They've used it before and mine can mimic this sound exactly. For those who have one, here's my

Acordes

```
(overdub maybe?)
                                   strum slow
G2 Tremolo phasing (gets one whole chord in on this part!) G3 (Lead fill. Can't tell if it's clean or chorus or last time only 7
```