

Sonic Youth - Teenage Riot

Tom: G

Thurston's tuning: GABDEG
Lee's tuning: GGDDGG

Thurston's parts...

Intro:

and when the song kicks in, T plays this...

Verse riff:

Chorus chords:

the break starts with a rapid strumming of this chord

after that bit, go back to playing the main riff and back to the verse and chorus parts... end on big G chord (same chord used for beginning of break)

Lee's part...

all of lee's parts are really low in the mix, so i'm not completely certain if this is correct. but, it's close enough. this is one song where it doesn't matter if it's played sloppy. in fact, it sounds better that way.

for the intro, lee plays something like this:

for the main riff of the song, lee backs up T with this...
harm.

(t)=pick rapidly with much speed

it's really tough to hear what lee is playing for the verses. most of the time, he's just playing open strings and some harmonics. here's a little thing that sounds cool.
harm

lee's chorus riff

don't be afraid to throw in some of those high g strings in with the chorus riff

for the break, lee starts off with : G|--0--- then, go back to the main riff...

in the last verse, lee throws in some little riffs

at the first run thru of the verse riff, lee plays this:

then, at the end of the verse, right before the last chorus, lee plays and that's all.....
