Tom: E
                                                            There's too many ways to say goodbye
                                                                           E
                                                           But it's quite the opposite this time
Been around the world and back this year
                                                            Sometimes I can't help but say
Told myself I wanna face this fear
                                                            I'm falling in love and it's scaring me
                  A2
But I don't think I can stand on my own
                                                            It came to me in a dream
She's got eyes like spring, legs like the summer
                                                            Now all that's left is our empathy
Everybody says she looks just like her mother
                                                            But this is just the life I ordered
 E A2
But I think she wants that left alone
                                                            One step back and two steps forward
There's too many ways to say goodbye
                                                           Sometimes I can't help but say
                Ε
                                                            A2 B
But it's quite the opposite this time
                                                           We're making history
                                                           E E B A2 E B
                                                                    Our history
Sometimes I can't help but say
I'm falling in love and it's scaring me
                                                           You pulled me in like a tidal wave
                                                                Dbm
                                                           And let ourselves just float away
It came to me in a dream
                                                           A2 E Dbm
                                                           With no direction, or a way to rewind
Now all that's left is our empathy
                                                            Yeah, you pulled me in like a tidal wave
But this is just the life I ordered
                                                                               В
One step back and two steps forward
                                                            Thought that it was my mistake
                                                                        В
Sometimes I can't help but say
                                                            And we'd fall apart before I say goodbye
                                                                        B A2
We're making history
                                                            But it's quite the opposite this time
                                                            Sometimes I can't help but say
Been around the world and back this year
                                                            I'm falling in love and it's scaring me
I never wanted to be so sincere
                                                            It came to me in a dream
          A2
I'm not a hero or a saint
                                                            Now all that's left is our empathy
        E A2
                                                           But this is just the life I ordered
But don't push me away
When you believed in me it brought us together
                                                            One step back and two steps forward
                 Е
Everybody says that it won't last forever
                                                            Sometimes I can't help but say
                A2
                                                            We're making history
Close your eyes, don't cut the ties, it makes sense
                                                                          A2 E
                                                                    Our history
