

The Arcadian Wild - The Anthem Of Mr. Dark

tom:

Intro: D G D A

I never have the time to do the nothing that I want to do

I'm always rushing around being

What other people want me to

Be

Well, the fabric of my soul is

Frayed and falling apart at

The seams

I'm tied up and tied down

By the strings of other people's

Dreams

I'm starting to see that that isn't me

My freedom isn't free

All I really want is some room to breathe

Someday, I'll learn to say no

Find a way to lighten my load

People take possession of the pieces of my weary heart

I'll learn to let go, and learn to say no

( G D A )

Feeling like a lion lying down behind the bars of this cage

Yea, the king of the beast is

Now the king of this enclosed

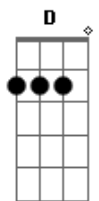

Space

Wear and tear and worry

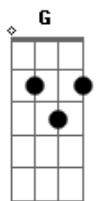

They've been drawing their lines on

My face

I feel a whole lot older than my chronological age

I'm starting to see that that isn't me

My freedom isn't free

All I really want is some room to be me

Someday, I'll learn to say no

Find a way to lighten my load

People take possession of the pieces of my weary heart

I'll learn to let go, and learn to say no

Give us your time and give us your money

Just lay down your body

There's no sense in running

Now cut off your hair

And put on a tie
Just do what you're

Told without wondering why

Don't ask for a reason

No matter the season
Sit down and comply

'Cause we don't want no free men

We'll say what you are

Decide what you're not

You go, and you go

And you never will stop

Someday, I'll learn to say no

Find a way to lighten my load

People take possession of the pieces of my weary heart

I'll learn to let go, and learn to say no

People take possession of the pieces of my weary heart

I'll learn to let go, and learn to say no
