The Bangles - Hero Takes a Fall

```
Tom: C
                                                                        С
                                                                And I won't feel bad at all
  D
The hero was exposed when
                                                                When the hero takes a fall
His crimes were brought to the light of day
                                                                When the hero takes a fall
Won't be feelin sorry, sorry, sorry on the judgement day
                                                                 (solo over verse / bridge chords)
G
          F
Wasn't it me who said
                                                                Emotion is a virtue
G
There'll be a price to pay
                                                                For you it is the one fatal flaw
       С
                                                                Sitting on your throne and drinking
And I won't feel bad at all
                                                                Thinking she'll return your call

When the hero takes a fall
                                                                Every story's got an ending
                                                                Look out, here it comes here it comes
Your mother told you stories
You substitute what girls tell you more
                                                                And I won't feel bad at all
Suddenly your sycophants are chanting slogans at your door
                                                                When the hero takes a fall
G
               F
                                                                When the hero takes a fall
They're seeing through you now
                                                                 ("oh oh, oh oh, oh whoa oh" to G F and D chords)
        F
G
I saw it all before
