

The Cat Empire - Voodoo Cowboy

Tom: C

His mother was a snake
 His father was a scarecrow
 Born in the desert with his hat on his head
 Never missed a shot
 Sharp as a pharaoh
 Tequila in the sunrise
 The desert was his bed
 Now he could dance the barn dance
 Like nobody before him
 But no woman would take him
 Cos his eyes were rather strange
 In them you could see the emptiness of the desert
 Yellow like a scarecrow
 Black like a snake

He was a voodoo cowboy
 And he had never found a girl to call his own
 On and on and on
 That lonely cowboy
 But a cowboy's never really
 Cowboy's never really alone

He had a horse
 Whose name was Plenty
 And they saw things no man or beast has ever seen
 Out in the redness
 Out in the empty
 Where ghosts and spirits walk around like you and me

He met a girl

Called Annabelle
 And she was just the prettiest thing he'd ever seen
 Under a lake at the edge of the world

He met a girl
 Walking through the edges of his dreams

He was a voodoo cowboy
 And he was following a psychedelic stream
 On and on and on
 That lonely cowboy
 But a cowboy's never really
 Cowboy's never really deceived

So he rode down
 Under the water
 And the sunset made a fire above his head
 In search of warmth in search of love
 In search of heaven above
 But all he felt was cold
 And all he touched was wet
 But he could see her down a little bit deeper
 And all he wanted was to hold her to his chest
 So he reached out and she reached out
 And he touched her and she drew him in
 And kissed him as he breathed his final breath

He was a voodoo cowboy
 And he had finally found a girl to call his own
 Lucky lucky cowboy
 Because cowboys almost always Cowboys almost always die alone
