

The Heavy Horses - Pale Rider

```
Intro: Dbm A Dbm
                                                                It's one more killing to the man that has no name
                                                                ( Dbm B Dbm B Dbm B Dbm A B Ab Dbm )
Ride to town, shoot them up and keep on going
Cause I got a job to do and I don't stop for no one
                                                                So ride to town, shoot em_up and keep on going
So get your gun, and kiss your wife, and lock up your daughter Cause I got a job to do and I'll be gone come morning
Don't let her fall in love with the pale rider
                                                                Get your gun, and kiss your wife and hug your daughter
                                                                Tell her you're off to meet the pale rider
(B Dbm)
                                                                Don't let her fall in love with the pale rider
Many men 've quickly found I'm unforgiving
They say dying ain't no way to make a living \stackrel{\mathsf{F}}{\mathsf{E}}
                                                                And I walked down into Mexico
So get your gun and bet your life, if you're a gambler
                                                                What I came for I think you know
You draw a dead man's hand against the pale rider
                                                                I take another life, it's all the same
                                                                It's one more killing to the man that has no name
And I walked down into Mexico
                                                                                             В
                                                                It's one more bullet to the man that has no name
What I came for I think you know
                                                                (ABAb Dbm)
I take another life, it's all the same
