

The Kinks - Do You Remember Walter?

```
Tom: Bb
                                                               Do you remember, Walter, how we said we'd fight the world so С
                                                               we'd be free.
Walter, remember when the world was young
                                                               Cm7
                     Eb
And all the girls knew Walter's name?
                                                               We'd save up all our money and we'd buy a boat and sail away \mathsf{Cm}
                                                               to sea.
Walter, isn't it a shame the way our little world has changed?
                                                                   Ah
                                                               But it was not to be.
Do you remember, Walter, playing cricket in the thunder and I knew you then but do I know you now?
the rain?
                                                                                                                    Eb
                                                               Walter, you are just an echo of the world we knew so long ago
Cm7
                                                                            Cm7
Do you remember, Walter, smoking cigarettes behind your garden If you saw me now you wouldn't even know my name.
gate?
                                                               Cm7
                                                               I bet you're fat and married and
   Ab
Yes, Walter was my mate,
                                                               you're always home in bed by half-past eight.
But Walter, my old friend, where are you now?
                                                               And if I talked about the old times
         Bb
Walter's name
                                                               you'd get bored and you'll have nothing left to say.
                     Cm
                                      F
                                                     Bh
                                                                Ab
                                                                        Eb
                                                                                          G
Walter, isn't it a shame the way our little world has changed? Yes people often change, but memories of people can remain.
```

Acordes

