

The Reign Of Kindo - Soon It Shall Be

Tom: C
Intro: E A E A

Your hair in the wind puts asunder
 All the cares this world has to give
 And the lights in your eyes bring such wonder
 To a man who thought all had been seen
 Though the nights have been cold and unkind, dear
 Oh that smile on your face is marigold
 That blooms in the springtime for lovers anew
 Oh Just like the day I found you
 So I wrote you this song, though in vain dear
 For no lyric or rhyme can contain
 All the gladness you bring to the saddest of days
 Oh my love, how I yearn for you now
 Though the days have grown long in our wanting

And the distance between us remains
 There's a gleaming of light up ahead, dear
 Yes, the sun will shine after the rain
 Oh the laughter we'll share will be endless
 As we're dancing beneath the moonlight
 And your hand is in mine with our fingers entwined
 Oh love, now, how soon it shall be
 Though the waiting it seems never ending
 And the hours they, pass without haste
 There will soon come a day when the snow melts away
 And my love will be right by my side
 So you see, dear, my heart will not falter
 And my hopes will be not satisfied
 Till the miles have been left far behind you
 And no distance between us resides

Acordes

Diagram illustrating the chords used in the song, arranged in a grid:

- Row 1: E, Em, G7M, C7M, F7M, Eb7M, C, A, Bm
- Row 2: En7, Gbn, Gbn7, Fn7, Am7, D, Dm, G, Am
- Row 3: Bb