

Tom: E

The Vamps - Million Words

```
Blamed this whole weight on my shoulders bearing down on me
 All the times that it slipped out my dimension
                                                               But then I only had to see you, don't you know how good that feels?
That you're the one I need and if I forgot to tell you
                                                               These are all the words I should've sent
I was wrong to ever doubt it and you're all I think about,
                                                               Did I miss my chance? Is it too late to say?
There's a million words I shoulda said
                                                               [Refrão]
 I remember you were standing in my doorway
                                                                And if I could only catch your eye and throw a smile
And the words were on my lips, that you never looked so
                                                               Maybe I could stop to say what's screaming in my mind
Oh just to be near you, don't you know how good that feels?
                                                               You should know that what I want to say could take all night
These are all the things I should've said
                                                               Or my whole life
Did I miss my chance? Is it too late to say?
                                                               Do I get a second chance to make you mine tonight?
[Refrão]
                                                               Now I'm half a world away from you
                                                                        В
Now I'm half a world away from you
                                                               But you're always on my mind
                                                                        Dbm
But you're always on my mind
                                                               There's a million words that I could've said
There's a million words that I could've said
                                                               That you might still be mine
                                                               And if I ever get the chance again
That you might still be mine
And if there's someone where I used to be
                                                               I would tell you every day
                                                                       Dbm
                                                               With the million words that I should've said
I hope he tells you every day
    Dhm
The million words that I should've said
                                                               I wish I could tell you, always
I wish I could tell you, always
                                                               Always, always
                                                                    Α
When you were mine, did I push you far away?
                                                               Always, always
Acordes
```

