                 D
Take all the goods from all the bads
                                 D
And tell the people that you've gone away
                              D
Now lift your head up to the sky
                              D
                 D
And now you can tell apart the black from the white
And we waste the time they treasure dear And my only thought is that they could be right
Well look there goes another year
About as distant as a satillite
                                         D
And I feel safe,
                            so safe
                                         D
           D
                D
                                  D
And I feel safe,
                            so safe
           D
                            G
And I feel safe,
                        so safe
  C
So safe
The worlds a small child in the dark
And my mind's the same place that it's always been
The monsters seem to fade so fast
Upon the waking of another dream

```
I'm not afraid of anything they've got to say
If your okay, because your tucked away
Don't go astray
You've got to be just who you are, who you are

When I was young things didn't last
My only cures went to the price of sweets
Now I'm older I can laugh
A dolly mixed up man with rotten teeth
And I feel safe,
                          so safe
                                       D
