Don't stop the cab, the world is going mad, but we let go off They switch off the light, they crawl into our thoughts
                                                            It's all our fault, we should've fought
We're our own black hole, they swallow our souls
                                                                         Am
                                                            But they flash us too bright
         Dm
We settle down in thrall, we're so small
